

ALSAMEX SPARK RESISTANT COVERS
USER GUIDE

Introduction

Alsamex spark resistant covers are designed to be used to provide protection for pipework, cables and other structures or items from weld & grinding sparks and from light welding spatter. The covers are manufactured using 850 gsm glass-fibre fabric, coated on both sides with a fully cured Flame Retardant neoprene rubber. The non-permeable material has excellent resistance to oxidation and weathering, providing good resistance to oils, greases, acidic liquids & vapours and has high abrasion resistance.

Placing and securing the Covers:

Where multiple covers are used always ensure an overlap of at least 4"/100mm.

The covers must be wrapped tight as possible and, where practicable, any surplus fabric should be pushed and tucked under any pipework & cabling to avoid trip hazards. Always ensure any exposed Velcro fasteners are facing downwards or below horizontal axis.

Do not use the covers with any Velcro facing upwards or in the likely path of sparks or welding spatter. Where possible, keep any flaps facing downwards, as shown in Fig. 1 above, to avoid trapping weld spatter and sparks that are falling from above.

All colours shown above are for illustration purposes only

General safety cautions:

- ✓ Consider access & egress; ensure the installed covers & unused covers are not obstacles, or trip hazards, especially around foot of ladders. Safeguard your own safety and that of your workmates, by ensuring correct installation and regular inspections.
- ✓ Any torn covers should be withdrawn from service and replaced.
- ✓ Always follow site safety procedures and hot work ACOP and control measures.

Remember safety first every time
